We try our best to give residents the highest quality health care. As part of the promise to care for them, we keep information about their health private. Under a national law that went into effect on April 14, 2003, it is illegal to violate this code.

The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996, or "HIPAA" for short, includes punishments for violating residents' privacy. Even accidentally breaking the rules can result in penalties and embarrassment for you and our organization.
